

"We flew to Salzburg, Austria, and then to Obertauern in 1965. They were just having fun in the snow on the bikes. They were a bit shy with me when I first met them, but by this time we had begun to have a strong personal rapport."

"This was also in Austria. Local residents had gathered in the background, enjoying what was happening. There were moments when I shot Paul doing something silly, and then took pictures of the local kids imitating and laughing at him."

