

HOT DAY AT THE ZOO

Zoograss

hotdayatthezoo.com

Hot Day at the Zoo's live Zoograss benefits as much from the audience's audible enthusiasm and encouragement as it does from the group's own prowess. This is a bluegrass band best witnessed in concert—appreciation for its rowdy, ramshackle sound is boosted considerably by a few beers and a dance floor. Even when the band dallies in heartfelt sentiment, as on “Back This Way,” there's more than a hint of irreverence involved: “She never tried to be a good mama to me/She lied to me, she never cried for me/ And then that bitch, she died on me.” The prolonged instrumental workouts on “Old Mill” and a raucous rendition of Peter Rowan's “Midnight Moonlight” reflect the players' considerable dexterity, but it's the audience's adrenaline that fuels these proceedings.

AS SEEN IN:

“Live Zoograss benefits
as much from the audience's audible
enthusiasm and encouragement as it does from the group's own prowess.”

- M Music & Musicians

March/April 2010